

Shower thoughts. Not skin thoughts.

An idea for getting men to choose Dove Men body wash,
instead of whatever happens to be in the shower.

Nobody picks a body wash.

They inherit one.

Should they have pitted on lap 31?

What I should have said in that meeting.

If I leave at 8:40 and skip the flyover, do I beat the traffic?

Why is it called a building if it's already built?

Is my fantasy captain injured, or just resting?

Not one is about skin.
And that's fine.

The shower is where men do their best thinking. Dove Men does the skin thinking, so they don't have to.

The Shower Thoughts bottle.

- 1 Men post to Reddit's Showerthoughts, like they already do every day.
- 2 Each month, the top-voted thoughts are picked, with permission.
- 3 They're printed on the back of Dove Men bottles, credited by username.
- 4 The only bottle in the shower with something worth reading.

Leftovers are just dinner that believed in you.

Thought of in the shower.

Skin taken care of by Dove Men.

Dove Men · Shower Thoughts

Plus: gym mirrors with hydrophobic coating that only speak when steamy, and 15-second "Mid-Shower Monologue" creator films.

It gives men permission not to care, and a reason to pick the bottle anyway.

No lecture

It never asks men to care more. It celebrates what they already think about.

Bottle = medium

The idea lives on the product, so choosing the idea means choosing the bottle.

Real men

F1 strategy, carburettors, commutes and leftovers. Witty, uplifting, true.

Measured

Switching, submissions, limited-edition sell-through and earned shares.

Akshara Singh

Idea, copy and design · Akshara.singh.marketing@gmail.com